

The Library

UBC Staff: Welcome to the Library

As a staff member of the University of British Columbia, you are eligible for UBC Library borrowing, database access and other services. First you must obtain your UBCCard which is the University's official ID card and which provides library as well as other campus services. Apply for your UBCCard at the UBC Carding Office, located in the UBC Bookstore. Please see www.ubccard.ubc.ca for more information.

UBC Library is one of the leading research libraries in Canada. There are libraries at 9 locations on the Vancouver campus, at four off-campus locations in Vancouver and one at the UBC Okanagan campus in Kelowna.

Together the libraries support teaching and research across many disciplines with more than 6 million volumes (including 520,000 e-books), 97,000 subscriptions, 608,000 electronic resources, 5.3 million microforms, and more than 833,000 maps, audio, video and graphic materials. As a UBC staff member you also have access to the Library's many online databases and services.

Specialized libraries include Woodward Library with the largest biomedical collection in western Canada, the Law Library which supports the research and teaching of the Faculty of Law, and the Asian Library with books and journals in Asian languages.

From the UBC Library home page at www.library.ubc.ca, under Services for You click on Staff for more information and links. From the home page, you can also search the UBC Library catalogue, connect to article indexes and other databases (many with full text) and explore thousands of online books and other resources.

Library hours vary throughout the year and are posted in the libraries and on the UBC Library website at: www.library.ubc.ca/hours.
